Christopher S. Foote & A. Greenberg: Active Oxygen in

One important subject to study is the chemistry of reductive oxygen adsorption by carbons in connection with their electrochemical behavior and catalytic activity in reactions of oxidation, as well as the possibilities of their use as oxygen sensors , , , .

Mechanism of reductive oxygen adsorption on active carbons

The O atoms that are added to the ethylene molecules to give EO originate from SO_4 , which may solve the long-standing question about the active oxygen species in this reaction.
