In finance, model risk is the risk of loss resulting from using insufficiently accurate models to make decisions, originally and frequently in the context of valuing financial securities. However, model risk is more and more prevalent in activities other than financial securities valuation, such as assigning consumer credit scores, real-time probability prediction of fraudulent credit card ...

Under the Basel II guidelines, banks are allowed to use their own estimated risk parameters for the purpose of calculating regulatory capital. This is known as the internal ratings-based (IRB) approach to capital requirements for credit risk. Only banks meeting certain minimum conditions, disclosure requirements and approval from their national supervisor are allowed to use this approach in ...

Abstract. We propose a new quantitative measure of model fragility, based on the tendency of a model to over-fit the data in sample. Structural economic models are fragile when the cross-equation restrictions they impose on the baseline model appear excessively informative about model parameters that are otherwise difficult to estimate.
