Human geography is the branch of geography that deals with the study of people and their communities, cultures, economies, and interactions with the environment by studying their relations with and across space and place. Human geography attends to human patterns of social interaction, as well as spatial level interdependencies, and how they influence or affect the earth's environment.

IMAGE: Victoria Henshaw's Sheffield smell walk, mapped. Regular Edible Geography readers will know that smellscape is a recurring subplot of this blog – a diversion that I justify on the basis that roughly ninety percent of what we perceive as taste is actually smell. For the most part, the built environment consists of accidental and overlooked odours – an unintentional backdrop of ...
